There is also a pictured list at the end of this zine if you prefer to see the art next to the artist's name.

This zine does not represent all species of the mustelidae family, we tried our best to include as many as possible. We apologise if your favourite is not represented here and hope you can still enjoy the wonderful art of the other species!

Lyncodon patagonicus | Huroncito patagónico

Diet:

- Rodents
- Lagomorphs
- Small birds

Little is known about the smallest mustelid of South America. They inhabit herbaceous and shrub steppes in arid and semiarid areas, and have nocturnal and crepuscular habits.

 Area of distribution (IUCN)

An artistic illustration of a Pacific marten perched on a snow-laden pine branch at night. The marten has dark fur with a lighter-colored throat and chest. The scene is set against a dark, starry night sky, with snow falling gently around the animal. The pine needles are green and dusted with white snow. The overall mood is quiet and watchful.

MARTES FOINA

BEECH MARTEN

Also known as the stone marten, house marten or white breasted marten. Its native range spans across europe and central asia, living in a wide range of habitats due to it's adaptability. Its white throat patch is the defining feature that sets it apart from other marten species.

There are currently eleven known subspecies of Martes foina.

MARTES MARTES

EUROPEAN PINE MARTEN

Also known as the eurasian pine marten or just pine marten. Its native range spans across Europe, Anatolia and parts of West Asia, living mostly in forested areas. It is the only mustelid species with semi-retractable claws, this allows better grip aiding their arboreal lifestyle. There are currently eight known subspecies of Martes martes.

JAPANESE • MARTEN

"The fox has seven disguises, the tanuki has eight, and the marten has nine"

Recognised for their great mythical ability to shapeshift, Japanese martens (Martes melampus) reside in the woods of Japan, from Honshu all the way over to Kyushu. They prefer broad-leaved forest habitats, but can also be found in suburban settings. They're omnivores and typically consume meat from fish and frogs, as well as fruits and seeds. These martens are nocturnal. They're also solitary in nature.

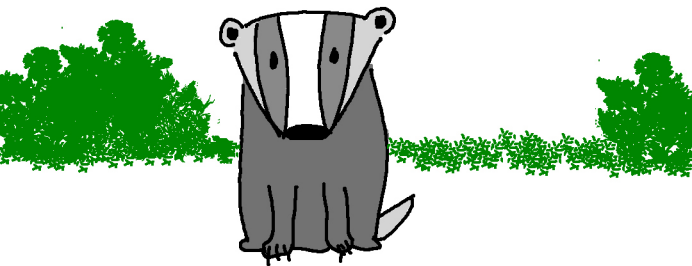

Fun Fact: A group of martens is called a richness!

Mustela africana
(tropical weasel)

The Amazon weasel, also known as the tropical weasel, is a species of weasel native to South America. It was first identified from a museum specimen mislabelled as coming from Africa, hence the scientific name. Amazon weasels have been found in humid areas, mainly in forests close to the banks of rivers.

CONCEPT & SKETCH BY TAZERPONES
PIINEMARTEN 2025

AMERICAN MINK
NEOGALE VISION

An artistic illustration of an African striped weasel in a savanna landscape. The weasel is white with a prominent black stripe running down its back and a blue stripe along its side. It is standing on a rocky outcrop, looking towards the right. The background features rolling hills, scattered green trees, and a purple sky with white stars. A small white box with a blue border is positioned to the left of the weasel, containing its name and scientific classification. In the bottom right corner, there is a small, faint white outline of a leaping animal.
